CIRCULAR ECONOMY

Ever wondered what a circular economy is and how you can participate in this emerging economy? How can you help your business become more efficient, resilient and sustainable? How are global factors, including China's ban on foreign waste, changing the game and contributing to the need to rethink waste and take action at a local level?

Attend the Circular Hub forum being held in the Hunter Region and find out more about what we can do in the local community to minimise business and environmental risks.

This forum provides the opportunity to collaborate, connect and build capacity in the region to progress local circular economy opportunities.

Who is this forum for?

Local manufacturers, businesses generating waste and resource streams, industry groups, business chambers, sustainability and environmental collaborators, government organisations and councils are encouraged to attend.

This innovative sustainability forum will provide you with the opportunity to:

- meet key stakeholders and learn more about the circular economy
- identify opportunities to reduce business costs
- become more sustainable
- understand the circular economy and how you can actively participate at a local level
- reduce business risks
- identify funding opportunities
- identify potential collaborations and available support to progress projects
- assess local interest to foster a circular hub that leads to a more resilient and prosperous region

Who is presenting?

There will be a combination of short presentations, Q&A session panel and time for networking and identifying strategic collaboration opportunities.

Resource efficiency case studies and business support

A social and community program underway in the Hunter

SME innovation and collaborative R&D project opportunities

Q&A interactive session - Including industry representatives from Australian Industrial Ecology Network (AIEN), Office of Environment and Heritage, NSW EPA and forum attendees
